Epic Bus Journey After Road Block

LAS LA BICHE. — Week-end passengers on Canadian Coachways between Edmonton and Lac la Biche will long remember their trip as eventful if not epic.

Combination of a storm-burst and an uncompleted culvert practically isolated the village to the south; but Coachways delivered their passengers — finally — and mainly thanks to hurculean efforts of Driver Stan Dacyk.

Horse and wagon, tractor, trucks, automobiles and a jeep all were used in winning through. If slang may be used for feet, even a team of dogs played an important part in victory.

Trouble started when the bus reached the culvert construction, about two miles south of Plamondon Corner. Excavation was about 25 feet deep and 50 across.

At this point a canoe would have come in handy to ford the creek.

Shortest detour, via Blue Jay and Charron, was impossible for bus passage—and nigh the same for anything short of an aircraft, as returning passengers who had to make the journey in a jeep discovered. The detour added about 15 miles to the trip, not counting up and down nor sideways.

The driver solved the problem of his outward journey only when he scaled the excavation and aroused neighboring farmers. The saga of all the various efforts to get passengers and equipment past the obstacle involved all the aforementioned equipment, and only ended with everyone safe in Lac la Biche at 5:30 a.m.

"I only had time to see if my blankets were on the bed, in case I ever got a chance to use them, and then had to start back again," commented Driver Stan Dacyk.

Yet good humor of driver and passengers prevailed on both journeys.

So it went throughout the journeys.

When Stan asked a farmer in the middle of the night which was best detour road, he replied: "Only way is to try them all and find out which is least bad."

As a borrowed automobile which served on the return trip as far as Plamondon stopped on the road to pick up a passenger, the surprised passenger exclaimed: "Is this the bus!"

"A bit small—got shrunk in the rain," remarked Stan. (It certainly did seem small to the nine who had to crowd into it at one point!)

"Where do we stop for pony express—you've tried everything else?" asked one passenger during the detour, over a road about as bad as a road could be.

"I knew Canada was big but I didn't realize there was so much of it nobody wanted," contributed another.
ney.

Apparently it had been anticipated the culvert would be completed Saturday. An early morning storm put a stop to work,

So it went throughout the jour- however. While Lac la Biche had only a taste of the storm, from Plamondon west it amounted to a cloud burst.

A great many trucks and buses turned back to Edmonton without attempting the detour.

Several others which did attempt were sorry and turned back.

Canadian Coachways won through only through willing aid given by farmers of the district, particularly Williard and Napoleon Gauthier of Plamondon Corner, who must have used nearly every piece of machinery on the farm in the attempt to win the early-morning battle.

ENTOMOLGIST ATTENDS U.S. BUG TALKS

Provincial entomologist J. H. Brown will attend a conference at University of California this week when bubonic plague and related diseases will be discussed.

The Alberta entomologist will address the conference on plague roads and reservoirs, based on research he has carried out here in connection with Rocky Mountain spotted fever and bubonic plague in infested gophers and rats.

Among noted experts lecturing at the conference are C. R. Eskey, chief of the U.S. Public Health Service, and Carl J. Meyer, Hooper Foundation, University of California.

Freight Engineer Retired From N.A.R.

LA LA BICHE. — A Northern Alberta Railway man from Edmonton, well known to people of this town, has made his last run.

Railway career of 35 years ended Monday when Engineer Frank Lepine brought a Northern Alberta Railway's freight train into Dunvegan yards. Mr. Lepine started as a fireman with the Duluth and Minnesota Northern in the United States in 1909 but left in 1912 to go homesteading in western Canada.

In 1914 he joined the Edmonton and B.C. railway (later the N.A.R.) as a watchman, later being promoted fireman and engineer. He has worked out of Edmonton, McLennan and Lac la Biche and for the past few years has been on the freight run to Lac la Biche. Mr. Lepine plans to continue to live in Edmonton and raise chickens at his west Edmonton holding.

Jack Swetic and family have taken up residence in a house on our main street.

Residents of the Boyle district and those of the Athabasca district are voting about the withdrawal of lands from the Municipal Hospital District.

Miss Olga Kushnir and Miss Anne Humeny were recent visitors to the city. They had an enjoyable time.

A Ukrainian concert will be held in the Community hall on August 29. A dance will be held after.

Was Misled By His Sweet Tooth

BOYLE.—Cliff Anderson who lives three and a half miles northeast of Boyle had a helping hand with his honey run this season.

Seems that a great big black bear's sweet tooth led him to Cliff's hives which were situated close to the dwelling and there havoc was raised or should we say, extraction of three hives was proceeded with. Nevertheless Cliff spotted the unhired help and forthwith brought out his old trusty in an endeavor to hush the intruder away.

It seems that one of the pellets found its mark for after a long night's vigil, awaiting the return of the bear, Cliff and his broth-in-law George Barranoik decided to take to the woods following a trail of blood and needless to say, came upon the huge fellow dead to the world.

My Home, Our Community

If judged by material on the shelves in Edmonton Public Library, interest in municipal government is at a low ebb indeed.

The most up-to-date material harking back, most of it to the beginning of this century, and little enough to any date. This is no reflection on the library, which in other lines of endeavor is well stocked. And, brother, when even the sociologists do not find you interesting enough to waste a few words upon, you may consider yourself well and truly neglected.

This is lamentable and remarkable if, as more than one high-minded citizen has contended, local self-government is the bed-rock of our freedom.

Many persons have commented on difficulties of getting high calibre candidates for municipal office. If a successful businessman decides to make sacrifices for public life, he thinks in terms of "a wider field." Yet no form of government touches his life so intimately:' it protects and provides services for his property, himself and his loved ones.

He LIVES in the community, no matter what interests he may have elsewhere. Where his treasure lies, there is his heart also.

Many a prominent man will take part in organizations for betterment of is community, even serving directly under city council, and yet his activity stops short of standing for election to that council. Possibly many persons fear elections as a sort of popularity contest and that a defeat might hurt business. Explain it how you will, the fact remains that by and large municipal government is not attracting the type of administrator it needs.

We made a survey of civic administration in a number of western Canadian cities and invariably civic servants complained that they only had the member of council nominated to form policy for their department educated in city affairs when another election came along and they had to start the whole education process over again. Another complaint in common was that city planning was almost an impossibility when an individual could use influence to get his own way to the detriment, or complete ruin, of the over-all plan.

In town planning this has been universal; only a determined council and men of vision have been able to overcome it in a few instances.

Municipal government falls into three types: elective entirely, elective and commission, and city manager plus council.

Each has its advocates. Judging impartially by accomplishment, however, city manager type has been most successful. The commission form is probably an improvement over the purely-elective, but too often the commissioners, though well-intentioned, are handicapped by political considerations.

A city's business is the largest single business in that city. Yet no efficient business would tolerate for a moment having its affairs run the way the average city is administered. That the record has not been worse is mainly thanks to good fortune on the part of many cities in getting competent civic servants.

One of the most significant developments of our days is the growing social-consciousness of the average man. That is beginning to find reflection in growing interest in community activities. Why this interest should stop short at city government is both a curiosity and a problem.

If even half of those persons who are called "public-spirited citizens" took more interest in the PRACTICE of their citizenship they would not only be better citizens but we would have better cities. A man is described as a citizen, which indicates that we regard his residence in a community as a primary function.

We probably shall not lose any of our democratic freedom if local government slithers along in the same old way, but certainly our building for a better day begins with our home, which is in a community—OUR community.

CHEAP SOIL CONSERVATION METHOD

Agricultural propaganda keeps hammering at the farmer that if he will improve his methods he will increase his yield. Invariably the improved method recommended involves outlay by the farmer, with the propagandist silent on just how the farmer is to finance it.

To many farmers, how to raise money is more of a problem than how to raise crops.

Therefore, it is rather cheering to come across an experiment which promises considerable return for very little expenditure.

The CIL Agricultural News reports such an experiment on a 200-acre Wisconsin farm, almost half of which was unsuitable for cultivation.

In 1938, before conservation was attempted, 81 acres were in crop, 39 in pasture and 74 in woods not pastured. By 1946, crop acreage had been slightly reduced, pasture somewhat increased and conservation started.

Crop land was laid out in contours and strips on a five-year rotation. Lime and fertilizer were applied, pastures reseeded and grazing regulated.

A substantial increase in food production resulted. Crop yields soared 50 per cent. Total growth of both crops and pasturage increased from 172,158 pounds of digestible nutrients to an average of 235,895 pounds per year for the 1944-46 period. Sales of butter fat climbed from 4,386 pounds in 1938 pounds in 1938 to 6,050 pounds in 1946. Hog sales were boosted from 3,120 to 9,607 pounds.

The only real cash outlay was for the lime and fertilizer.

Experiments such as this are worth a try by western farmers, if only on a part-farm, more limited scale. Agricultural representatives are always willing to supply technical advice on such projects.

Confidentially

Did Newsmen Help Hero or Murderer?

By Jay Lloyd

True to detective fiction, he did not look like a murderer.

Mild-mannered, and of undeterminate age, although according to his record he must have been even then an old man, he looked more like a respectable suburbinite than a man who had spent the greater part of his life behind bars. Possibly because he appeared so inoffensive explains why I had courage to ask him directly if he had committed the slaying for which he had served the greater part of a life sentence.

He paused for a second before saying yes. Then he blamed it on his youthful violent temper. Beyond that he did not attempt to exonerate himself nor go into detail.

Not until 20 years later did I realize how odd this self-confession in itself was.

Yet from the moment I first spoke to him I had the impression there was something phony about him. The feeling persisted in spite of the sheaf of newspaper clippings he showed me which told his truly fantastic story. It just seemed peculiar to me that he would deliberately come looking for publicity. But a newspaperman learns it takes all kinds to make a world.

Even for this he had some semblance of reason. After his release from the penitentiary he had formed a vaudeville group. I gathered that, for a number of reasons, the troupe were now in temporary eclipse, and he thought publicity might help him to get started again.

With tongue in cheek, I wrote his story. To my surprise the Canadian Press asked for more details. Newspapers all along the line wanted more of this human interest story.

While I wrote what little extra I knew, I never learned the full story until just the other day when I read Robert Casey's "More Interesting People."

During the American Revolutionary war, Tom Maloney joined the Northern forces as a drummer boy. The hard-bitten soldiers of his battery, possibly because they did not trust each other, made him guardian of battalion funds. One day Confederate cavalry suddenly burst from a woods in a suicidal charge.

The attack was so unexpected, the Blue Coats broke and ran, Tom Maloney with them. After a few seconds of flight he suddenly remembered he had left the bag containing money which wasn't his, hanging on one of the guns. When he returned to get it, he saw that all the guns were laid and trained on the advancing horde.

He went down the line firing the guns. This drew attention of fleeing Northern soldiers who, overcoming their momentary panic, returned to their guns, and broke up the Confederate charge.

This incident—so the story goes—was not brought to Washington's official attention until years later when Maloney was in the pen for murder. A mislaid letter of General Grant was suddenly found and the convict was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the American equivalent of the Victoria Cross.

Many persons believed in Maloney's innocence, among them a firm of lawyers who worked for years to obtain his release. He actualy was sprung for a short time but had to return to durance vile because of a technicality. Ironically, during the short time he was out he became a comparatively rich man. He attended a lost luggage sale, bought a suitcase on impulse and found in it thousands of dollars of negotiable bonds.

The lawyers interested Casey, then a newspaperman on a large U.S. daily, in Maloney's story. The newspaper made such a fuss over Maloney he became a national figure for a time.

As was to be expected, Maloney was pardoned, and there possibly the story should have ended. But the years went by and Maloney died. Casey thought he should be buried as a national hero in Arlington cemetery. His newspaper got its Washington correspondent to use pressure on the government.

Back came information from Washington that a Congressional Medal had never been awarded to Maloney, no record of General Grant's letter was on file and, in short, from beginning to end the Reovlutionary War story had been made up.

Casey went to see the lawyers who had told him the story in the first place. They confessed that Maloney had found the medal along with the money in the suitcase.

"What do you care?" they asked in effect. "Maloney was innocent and you got a good story."

After what Maloney told me, I wonder just how innocent he was, not only in the murder, but in the whole affair.

But my real interest in the matter is that I didn't get the story. When I asked the city editor why it did not appear in our own paper—particularly when said city editor asked me to interview him in the first place—I was told the Associate Press had tipped off CP the man used publicity to panhandle.

Well, a late story is better than none at all, I always say.

SUCCESS

Want to be successful? A man is successful when he refuses to slander even his enemies; when he does not expect to get paid for everything he does; when he does not wait until tomorrow to do the things he might do today; when he is loyal to his employer and to his associates; when he intelligently co-operates with others, and is tolerant in thought and deed; when he studies constantly to prepare himself for a higher position financially and to rise in the estimation of his fellows.

Advertising Not Paid; Newspaper Sues

From the Bible

This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: From such turn away . . . but continue thou in the things which thou hast learned . . . and . . . hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.—II Timothy 3:1 to 5, 14 and 15.

Young Violinist Will Take Part In Fiddlers' Contest

Self-taught violinist, 12-year-old Alfred Myhre who resides on a farm near Kingman, Alberta, will head east shortly to take part in the "old-time fiddlers' contest" at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

The contest will be held early in September and the young fiddler has been entered in the contest by radio station CFRN in Edmonton, with the full co-operation of the Edmonton Club of the Associated Canadian Travellers.

Youngest of a family of seven, he first became interested in the violin after hearing a violinist perform at a community concert. His father, sensing his interest in music, purchased a violin and as there were no teachers nearby, Alfred had to teach himself. At six years of age, it was no easy task but daily practice was all that was needed and Alfred soon had the situation mastered.

His first big chance came when his sister entered him in one of the "search for talent" shows. He did not win first prize but he was one of the final prize winners.

Just how he'll fare in his first real big test is not known but as Alfred puts it "I might be a bit nervous, but I'll do my best." While in Toronto, Alfred Myhre will be the guest of the noted women's commentator, Kate Aitken.

Reclaiming Combined Straw

Ten million tons of straw will be needed in Western Canada to maintain the livestock population during the coming winter. Present conditions indicate that there will be a shortage of all types of feed. Ways and means of gathering straw are important to every livestock producers, says M. E. Dodds, Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask.

The straw buncher has been receiving a considerable amount of attention during the past few years as a simple and convenient piece of equipment for reclaiming straw from the combine. This attachment will vary in size from the small carrier, which collects and dumps straw in bunches up to 75 pounds weight, to the larger models whose capacity may be 800 pounds. The small carriers are usually directly attached to the combine while the trailer models may be full-trailers, semi-trailers or semi-mounted. The latter types require an extension elevator to convey the straw from the straw walkers to the buncher.

The choice of the type of equipment will depend, to some extent, on the amount and type of haying equipment available to pick and and transport the bunches to the stack yard. Buck rakes, power sweeps, or combination stackers are proving quite satisfactory for this purpose. The task is made easier if the bunches are dropped in windrows from which they can be swept into larger bunches or picked up directly and taken to the stack. It will not be likely that a power sweep or combination stacker will handle more than 800 pounds of straw at a time.

The pickup baler is enjoying some popularity as a means of reclaiming straw from the combine windrow. To provide a firm compact windrow, two or more combine windrows can be brought together with a side delivery rake. Loose grain and chaff will be lost by doing this and foregn material introduced into the swath. If two swathers, in tandem, are used for the initial harvesting operation, a swath 28 to 32 feet wide is provided for the combine. A good windrow results and the amount of baler travel is maintained and the cost of baling is materially reduced. The cost of providing baled straw is fairly high compared with other methods of reclaiming thisc by-product. For ease of handling, this cost may be warranted.

In an attempt to supply some answers, to the straw reclaiming problem a mimeographed bulletin, "Some ethods of Collecting and Handling Combined Straw," has been prepared and is available for distribution.

Legumes in Crop Rotation

Legumes have an important place in any cropping program designed to ensure enduring productivity of the soil. Worked into effective crop rotations, they give stability and permanence to agriculture. Results of crop sequence studies at the Dominion Experimental Substation, Smithers, B.C., bear out these statements, says J. V. Zacharias. For the seven-year period 1942-48, the yields of oats grown continuously on the same ground averaged 47.9 bushels per acre. For the same period, oats grown after sweet clover averaged 104.4 bushels; after red clover 102.9 bushels; after alfalfa 88.7 bushels; after potatoes 83.6 bushels; after timothy 77.4 bushels; after turnips 68.0 bushels; after oats-fallow 49.5 bushels; after oat-hay 48.9 bushels; after oats, turnips 46.6 bushels.

Under ideal conditions, a field of clover or alfalfa makes possible the fixation, in one season, of approximately 100 pounds of atmospheric nitrogen per acre. This is equivalent to the nitrogen contained in 500 pounds of a 20 per cent nitrogen fertilizer. Most atmospheric nitrogen is made available by the activities of nitrogen fixing bacteria growing on the nodules of the roots. Part of this nitrogen is used for the manufacture of protein rich feed and part is left in the soil.

Fortunately, one of the best means of increasing the organic content of the soil is to include a legume in the rotation. More than half the organic material in alfalfa is below the ground and one-third of the red clover plant remains in the soil after the hay crop has been removed. For short rotations in which the hay crop is of two or three years duration, the clovers are generally preferable because they are short lived and have a fibrous shallow root system which makes the organic matter immediately available. Alfalfa, because it is long lived, and, under normal conditions, reaches its maximum productivity after two or three years, is best suited for long-termlays.

RATS?

RED DEER. — Another rat scare in this up-to-now rodent-free province turned up here.

Kerry Wood thought he saw a brown rat at the fair grounds. It is believed that the rat may have come on the midway train for the recent fair.

As others might be roaming the grounds, bait and poisons were ordered from the provincial government.

Whether or not rats have come to Red Deer, health authorities are taking no chanches and a thorough hunt will be carried out and the grounds kept under observation for a time.

Boning Meat For Freezing

Putting your meat in the locker plant is welcome news, if you have been used to canning large quantities of meat. If you wish to get the most good from your locker so give the locker operator careful directions as to how you want it cut, and exactly how much you want in each parcel.

Removing bones from meat before packing for freezing saves considerable locker space and does not cause the meat to lose flavor or juiciness. As much as 35 per cent of the meat storage may be saved by taking out the bones. Moreover, boneless meat is easier to store and wrappers are less likely to be broken or punctured during storage.

Experienced taste-testers could detect no difference in the flavor of retail cuts of good grade beef, cooked with and without the bone. These tests appear to disprove the old idea that bone gives flavor to meat.

In discounting the pros and cons of boning meat, Kenneth F. Jarner,, extension specialist of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, says that one advantage of leaving bone in is that it hastens the cooking of some cuts. For example, a standing rib roast cooks faster than more compact boneless rolled roast.

Mr. Warner believes that the greatest savings may be made by removing large bones, such as shoulder bones, shanks and knuckles. The bone in T-bone steaks may be needed to hold the meat together to improve its appearance. A piece that is too cut up, not only looks less appetizing, but may be more difficult to cook satisfactorily.

As for nutritive value, bone contributes little, except some fat from the marrow, when meat is cooked by such usual methods as roasting, broiling or braising. However, if it is given long, slow, moist cooking with some mild acid like tomato or vinegar, the bone does contribute some calcium.

Bone that is removed from meat for freezing should not be discarded. It is excellent for soup stock.

Letter to the Editor

Rocky Mt. House, Alta,
July 9, 1949.

Dear Friend:

Last night our Kinsmen Scramble Word Contest ended with a Frolic Dance, attended by 500 people.

The name of Mr. Fred Victor, Saunders, Alta., was drawn out of the barrel. Mr. Victor is now eligible to win his 1949 Studebaker by correctly unscrambling the word.

"Roflic." Of course the unscrambled word is "Frolic." We are sure that Mr. Victor will be able to correctly unscramble the word and collect his car. Miss Betty Owens of Rocky Mountain House wins $100 for selling the winning ticket.

We are sorry you cannot all win, but your donations have gone to a worthy cause—Help the Kiddies Campaign and our Arena Fund.

We would like to extend to you our sincere and grateful thanks for your co-operation. Remember, we have acknowledged all donations and would appreciate having the winner's name mentioned by you to as many as possible to whom you sold tickets.

Again many thanks.

Most sincerely yours,
The Rocky Mountain
House Kinsmen Club.

EGG LAKE NEWS

EGG LAKE. — Miss Mae Olson is home on a holiday. Also her sister Eileen was here on a holiday but has now returned to her job in Edmonton.

Our picnic would have been a real success if it hadn't been for the big rain that fell early in the evening. During the day the Egg Lake girls' softball team played Lac la Biche, but of course, lost. Let's give the girls a chance, eh? After all it's their first play.

A timber wolf has been seen around here. Let's hope that there are not more of them.

Egg Lake girls went and played in Normandeau. They lost — but with time and a little more practice they will win.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Duperron are proud of their new-born son named Bernard.

Mrs. Bernard Amiot and her two sons were here on a visit. They have now returned to their home in Foothills.

Miss Joclyn Picard of Edmonton is passing the summer holidays at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Armand Lebeuf.

DONATVILLE AND DISTRICT NEWS

DONATVILLE. — There was a dance in Donatville on Aug. 12. Everybody had a swell time.

Mr. John Kachan came home from Athabasca minus his tonsils.

Mr. and Mrs. Makaryshyn went to Edmonton on Monday, Aug. 15.

The picnic in Frains turned out to be pretty good, since it was a nice day.

The weather has been pretty fair with a little rain and sunshine.

Hylo Ladies' Society Holds Meeting

HYLO.—On August 4 the Hylo Ladies' Society held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Bruno Meardi with 12 members present.

It was decided that the fencing of th sports grounds be postponed until after the peak of harvest when labor will be more vailable.

The uncomplimentary condition of the Hylo cemetery was discussed and the secretary was directed to post notices to call a meeting of all the Hylo residents, of all denominations, on August 11. This was done and the meeting although not so well attended proved quite successful. A temporary board was elected consisting of Mr. Peter Tymchuk as president, Mrs. Mary Grandish as secretary-treasurer.

It was also deecided that every resident of the Hylo community donate $2 toward a clearing, breaking and seeding project of the vacant portions of the cemetery.

Come one and all folks, and support this very urgent cause unanimously. This concerns us all as we want a beautiful plot to gather on when the clock of our time runs out. This isn't just someone's fancy, this is the concern of us all.

Public Meeting in Morinville Hall

MORINVILLE. — The meeting opened Tuesday, Aug. 9 at 8:30 p.m., with Mr. S. Lee, Administrator of the Town of Morinville addressing the meeting and presiding to the nomination of a chairman. Mr. Arthur Soeteart was elected chairman and Mrs. Rose Martel was elected secretary.

Mr. A. Soetaert called the meeting to order and explained the purpose of the meeting, stating that we were to vote for an Administrator or for a Counsel. He then asked Mr. Lee to address the meeting. Mr. Lee then stressed the importance of the meeting, then gave a resume of his past administration, then announced his intention of asking the ratepayers for two by-laws to float debentures to the amount of $35,000: $28,000 for street surfacing and $7,000 to provide for fire protection.

Mr. Joseph St. Laurent asked Mr. Lee about fire equipment and proposed that this by-law be given priority to the street program.

Mr. Alfred Martel made the motion that a vote be taken, which was seconded by Mr. Edgar Chevalier. Carried.

The chairman then asked that the purpose of the meeting and the proposed vote be explained in French as many ratepayers did not understand English. This was done by Mrs. Raymonde Riopel. The chairman thanked Mrs. Riopel for her speech and then the votation by ballots proceeded.

Three scrutineers were then appointed: Mr. Albert Ouelette, Mr. Arthur Chalifoux and Mr. Chas. Krauskopf.

After the votes were counted the chairman announced the results: 70 votes cast; 42 for elected counsel; 28 for an administrator.

Big Mill to Reopen October 1st

RADWAY.—The Radway Flour Mills, which has been milling good Radway district wheat for flour for overseas shipment, has closed down for August and September. F. W. Weder, president, stated last week that the mill will reopen on or about October 1st.

When it reopens it will also handle Canada Packers' line of Shur-Gain Feeds, in addition to doing grist work and exchanging of farm grains for mill products.

Since 1947 the mill has been milling wheat for export. Seven persons have been employed. With a daily capacity of 150 barrels of Flour (a barrel is equivalent to two 98-lb. bags) the mill has processed 90,000 barrels since 1947.

In 1932 the mills was built by W. A. Krause who also built the elevator which still has the Krause name painted on it. Subsequently it was acquired by Omer Saligo who sold it to the Radway Flour Mills Ltd. in June, 1947.

At the same time the International Grain Co. Ltd., also headed by Mr. Weder, purchased the elevator.

Considerable overhauling of machinery will be done in the two months that the plant is idle, Mr. Weder stated. In addition to his interests in the local plant and elevator Mr. Weder is president of the St. Paul Flour Mills.

To-day's GARDEN-GRAPH

Released by Central Press Canadian
By DEAN HALLIDAY

Few winter house plants can compete with the calla lily for beauty of both flowers and foliage.

The white-flowered calla with its graceful green leaves and the yellow one with its white spotted foliage are equally easy to force into flower indoors.

When planting calla bulbs the crown or top should be left protruding above the surface of the soil, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Plant only one bulb in a six-inch pot, as illustrated, or three in a nine-inch pot. The bulbs may be potted up any time from now until the early part of December.

Calla bulbs require a rich soil. In fact, it is almost impossible to give them too rich soil. They also want good drainage and lots of water. While growing the plant is benefited by an occasional feeding of weak liquid menure water.

A good mixture for potting callas consists of equal parts of well-rotted cow manure and earth. To this a little sand should be added to assure drainage.

The bulbs do not require a resting period in the dark or high temperatures to force out their flowers. The pots can be placed immediately after planting in a cool place where they will receive no direct sunlight and only a little light. To induce strong root systems, a temperature of about 60 degrees is best at the start. When growth begins, they can be moved to sunny windows.

During the summer pots of calla bulbs nay be placed on their sides, out of doors until September, when the bulbs should be repotted.

The striking yellow calla lily is recommended if color is wanted in the winter house garden. It does not bloom as profusely as the white one, but its white-spotted leaves make it worth growing even it no more than one of two flowers should appear.

Winter Wheat

Western Canada will produce a very small crop of winter wheat this season. Conditions since last fall have been extremely unfavorable for this crop and only a very small proportion of the land sown to winter wheat last fall will now be harvested. Practically no rain fell between September 1 and May 1 in the southern parts of Alberta and Saskatchewan. Consequently the ground was so dry throughout the fall that much of the seed failed to germinate, and many fields went into the winter with a thin, patchy cover. The dry spring weather also retarded the growth of winter wheat.

While results obtained this season have been disappointing, comparative yields of winter and spring wheat over a long period of years should be considered before becoming discouraged with winter wheat. At the Dominion Experimental Station, Lethbridge, Alta., says W. D. Hay, Kharkov winter wheat, and Marquis spring wheat have been grown on summer-fallowed land under similar conditions for the past 37 years. During that period only two complete failures of winter wheat occurred from winter killing, but the stand was reduced somewhat in a few other seasons. The average yield of Kharkov for the 37-year period (including the two seasons when the land was resown to spring wheat) was 26.6 bushels per acre, as compared with 25.5 bushels per acre for Marquis.

Yogo is also a very suitable variety of winter wheat for Western Canada. It is considerably less subject to shattering than Kharkov but has weaker straw.

The first week in September appears to be the ideal time for seeding winter wheat.

Weeds, particularly mustards, frequently are quite troublesome in winter wheat, but the new chemical weed sprays are proving satisfactory for keeping these under control.

More Export Controls Removed

Effective July 2, permits are no longer required for the export of potatoes, fertilizers, agricultural implements, electrical supplies, antimony, cocoa beans and sugar. The number of items for which export permits are now required has been reduced to 137, from a peak of 1,109 at the end of 1944, when wartime conditions demanded stringent controls over the export of many products.

Local Trustee Board

Hay River, a fast-growing community on Great Slave Lake and northern terminus of the new Mackenzie Highway, is the second Administrative District in the Northwest Territories to have a Local Trustee Board.

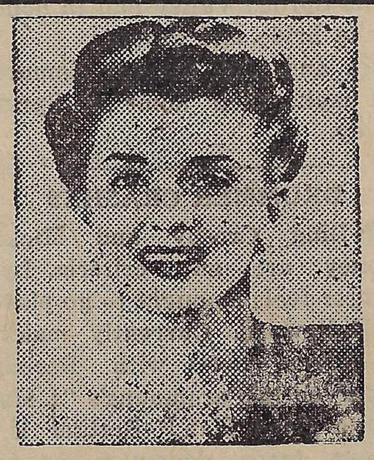

The new Hay River board, patterned on that at Yellowknife, has both elected and appointed members. Hay River has become the centre of a flourishing fishing industry.

West Indies Blacks Give Bird the 'Bird'

By JACK BIRD

(This is the second of a series of five articles on a trip to the West Indies and South America)

When we flew over Santiago de Cuba I remembered that this was where a hotly-contested battle of the Spanish-American War of 1898 had been fought.

I saw the whole harbor in one look. It was in the narrow neck of this harbor that Hobson had sunk the Merrimac in his endeavor to bottle up the Spanish fleet.. But But he hadn't quite succeeded, for the fleet did get out, although awkwardly, and Admiral Sampson chased Cevera's ships along the coast and shelled, sank and beached them one by one.

Ten minutes after leaving Cuba I could see Haiti, which means "high hills." In that country, which is French, and called the Black Republic, the negroes are the strangest-looking human creatures I have seen.

Like many other people in the Caribbean they carry everything on their heads and nothing in their hands. This balancing with ease, on their heads, anything from a pair of shoes to a six-foot pole or a trunk, is the reason, no doubt, that from the hips up, the people are as straight as a rod, and have the most peculiar gait imaginable.

MIGHTY SMALL DONKEY

The Haitians ride donkeys so small that their back is only about three feet off the ground. Usually the donkeys carry a large basket on each side of their back, while a grotesquely wrinkled-faced black woman, often with a pipe in her mouth, will ride on top between the baskets.

I found the Haitian blacks very insolent. For that matter, so were many of the negroes I met in Trinidad and Jamaica. As you walk down the street, minding your own business and thinking pleasant thoughts, suddenly you become aware that the negroes here and there along the way are looking at you in an unfriendly manner, and scowling. Some of them, when you pass by, will mutter under their breath at you. You don't quite catch what it is, but you know it isn't complimentary.

BEGGARS ANNOY

Many of the beggars are annoying nuisances. They won't take "no" for an answer, but will tag along beside you, or behind you, or even occasionally clutch your arm while they implore, beg—and even try to bully you—into giving them money.

The Dominican Republic, on the same 400-mile-long island of Hispaniola as Haiti, is as distinctly different as it would be possible to imagine. Hati is black, all black, and very black, whereas in the Dominican Republic the "blacks" are only a light brown. About half the people I saw were white.

Spanish is the language. The stores are clean and new-like, modern and up-to-date.

DICTATOR-REPUBLIC

But the Dominican Republic is a dictatorship. Soldiers and police are everywhere. All literature coming into the country is censored. I had an English-printed Cuban newspaper. The Customs politely but firmly took it away from me. They said I could have it back when I left the country. When I left the country I asked for my paper. They were sorry, they said, but they could not find it.

The Dominican Republic has a Gestapo system all its own. A reliable American living there told me that natives who raise their voice against the government simply disappear, while a foreigner is deported.

The capital of the country used to be Santo Domingo, but it was destroyed by a hurricane in September, 1930. Six years later it was rebult and named Cuidad Trujillo.

TOMB OF COLUMBUS

This is where I stayed. I visited the coral-built castle-like house of the son of Christopher Columbus. In the cathedral—the oldest in the New World — I saw the tomb of Columbus. On Discovery Day—the 12th of October—this tomb is open to the public. In the same building I saw the golden crown of Queen Isabella of Spain, and also some of her jewels. There was a silver cross about two and a half feet high, with a circle of 35 diamonds around the centre of it.

In the old section of San Juan, on the island of Puerto Rico, goats, liks dogs in many places, roam the streets at will, sticking their heads in the garbage cans in front of the stores and houses. In this city I saw the massive fortifications, built long ago along the shore and cliffs. and still in a good state of preservation.

Wage Earners Lament

'Tis the night before payday, and all through my jeans I've hunted in vain for the ways and the means. Not a quarter is stirring, not even a bit; the greenbacks have left me, the pennies have quit.

Forward, turn forward, O time in thy flight, and make it tomorrow just for tonight!—"The Lookout!"
